CONTENTS

The election history is presented in two volumes:

- Volume 1 – House of Assembly election results
- Volume 2 – Legislative Council election results and a list of all candidates for both houses.

The results in the individual volumes are presented chronologically in Parts. The starting date for each part is the first election at which the new election system was employed.

House of Assembly:

- Part 1 is defined by an election system based on first-past-the-post voting;
- Part 2 by the introduction of preferential voting (with the contingency vote variation applicable 1930 and 1933);
- Part 3 by the introduction of a guarantee of one vote, one value.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Completion of this project would not have been possible without input from a number of organisations and people.

The compilation of the electoral data was a massive task. Some of the data for the colonial period was compiled in the 1970s, as the basis of research for a thesis. For assistance with this, my thanks to the former manager of the Newspaper Collection in the State Library, Len Marquis.

The collection of the data for the colonial period, and for the century which followed, was undertaken in three key areas. My thanks to the State Library for allowing me access to the original newspapers, and especially to Philippa Clancy, who managed the process of the transfer of numerous volumes from store to the Library. Her interest in, and assistance with the project was appreciated.

My thanks to Howard Coxon, the former Librarian of the Parliamentary Library, for granting permission for the use of the newspaper collection. Jenni Newton of the Library has had a long-term interest in elections, and her assistance with this project was very much appreciated. Sandy Kane of the Library was always willing to offer her expert assistance with a range of difficult photo-imaging requirements.

The State Electoral Office gave strong support for the project, and I would thank especially the former Electoral Commissioner, Steve Tully for his support and willing assistance at all stages. My thanks also to Jade Bruss for her contribution to the data entry and checking processes and to all SEO staff who gave time to proofing.

The preparation of this manuscript involved the compilation, analysis, processing, proof-reading and formatting of thousands of names, data sets, and numbers. Two members of the staff of the State Electoral Office played an invaluable role.

Jane Peace, Senior Research Officer, was involved with the project from its beginning. She organised the production process, and proofread the manuscript, and her proposals about structures were always positive improvements. Her attention to detail is amazing, and the final product owes much to her interest and dedication.

Jasha Bowe took on the responsibility of designing, processing, formatting and preparing an extremely complex manuscript. His computer abilities were impressive, his willingness to deal with problems and incorporate the constant changes was very much appreciated. His always-present good humour and “unflappable” approach, assisted the task a great deal.

The Director of the SA History Trust, Margaret Anderson, was a strong supporter of the project from the beginning, and I thank her for this.

The project could not have been carried out without financial assistance. I thank the South Australian Government, through the Department of the Arts, the State Electoral Office and the History Trust of South Australia for their funding support.

March 2007 – Sesquicentenary of the first elections for responsible government in South Australia in 1857.

INTRODUCTION

This publication reports the results of all elections held for the South Australian parliament since it was inaugurated in 1857 to the 2006 general election.

It has been prepared and published as a celebration of the sesqui-centennial of the first elections for a bi-cameral parliament and the inauguration of the South Australian parliament in 1857. It is the first ever compilation of the results of all South Australian parliamentary elections.

Until this publication, there was no complete record of elections for the State. It is hoped that these volumes will provide not only an historical record for the first time, but that they will be a resource data-bank for all who are interested in the electoral and political history of South Australia, an official record of election results from 1857 to 1902, and an official record of voting at polling places from 1857 to 1921.

1. SOURCES AND AVAILABILITY OF DATA

Election results from 1902 (for electorate data) and 1921 (for polling place data) were sourced from official records. As well, the compilation of results by Colin Hughes in a number of publications provided data for the period from 1890. These data included political party affiliations, and were a valuable source and check.

Other sources consulted included election Writs, 'Blue Books', unpublished MSS, journals, and general histories.

For the period from 1857 to 1902 (electorate data) and from 1857 to 1921 (polling place data), the substantive source for this publication was contemporary newspapers. Recognition should be given to their editors for a commitment to a 'newspaper of record', for they devoted considerable space to detailed results for all but a few elections.

The Advertiser was judged to be the most accurate. This newspaper did not begin publication until after the first two elections, hence the sole source for these was the Register. Both daily newspapers were consulted, but in cases of disagreement – which were very few, and minor – The Advertiser was the source used.

Other newspapers used for the colonial data were The Observer, The Chronicle, The Evening Journal and, for some elusive country results, the country newspapers were consulted.

There were two sub-sections of the data where the full details were not always available. In the very early years, some details, especially numbers of voters, informal ballot papers, and polling place results for the Legislative Council, were not published. The latter was especially the case when only a few polling places were 'yet to arrive', and they 'could not affect the result'. These phrases were the most common explanation.

The second area of incomplete publication concerned polling place results. This was mainly for some early by-elections for the Legislative Council, especially those where the whole colony was involved in the Province-wide election to fill a vacancy, contested by two or three candidates. In most of these cases, the data were published at the Division level (the House of Assembly electorate), but on a handful of occasions, no data was published.

INTRODUCTION

2. ELECTORAL LAWS

The introduction to the results of each general election for the House of Assembly and, where necessary, for the Legislative Council, provides a summary of the significant political and electoral changes in the inter-election period.

This introductory section provides a summary of the key electoral laws relevant to the election data, over the period from 1857 to 2006. It is a summary only, extracted mainly from Dean Jaensch, Community Access to the Parliamentary Electoral Processes in South Australia since 1850, State Electoral Office 2002.

Franchise

From the first election in 1857, the principle of 'one person, one vote' applied for elections to both houses.

The definition of 'person' was established as an adult male aged at least 21 years for the House of Assembly, and an adult male who satisfied restricted property qualifications for the Council.

In 1894, the definition of 'person' included females.

Aboriginal persons had the franchise from the beginning.

Effective from 1972, the right to vote was changed to 18 years of age.

Enrolment

From the first election in 1857, enrolment for the right to vote in South Australia has been, and remains, voluntary.

In the contemporary context, an electoral roll is an accurate and secure register of the names of persons eligible to vote, maintained by modern information technology processes. In the early years of elections, enrolment and the establishment of an electoral roll was a very different matter. The Returning Officer was required to establish an 'Electoral List... of all persons resident in his district entitled to vote'. The procedures included publicity, an objection procedure and, for the first election only, the production of a certificate which had to be produced at the polling place.

It was clear from the first Electoral Act of 1855-6 that there was a commitment by governments, parliaments, and electoral administrators for the rolls to be as complete and accurate as possible, and that there was the widest opportunity for all citizens to have their enrolment recorded, and recorded accurately.

Voting

From the first election in 1857 until 1890, the only way for a person to vote was to attend a polling place. For voters in the sparsely-settled rural areas, this often involved travelling a considerable distance, despite the constant establishment of new polling places.

In 1890, absent voting was introduced, originally to allow seamen access to the polls. Absent voting was suggested in 1861, but rejected due to the 'problem of secrecy of the vote'. From 1890, it was available to all voters who could make their case, and the voting process was administered by a postmaster.

In 1929, postal voting was introduced for people who would be absent from their electorate on polling day, or who were not 'within five miles by the nearest practicable route of any polling place'. Institutional voting was introduced in 1976. In 1985, pre-poll voting was introduced, and absent, postal and pre-poll voting were subsumed under the heading of declaration voting. Mobile polling in remote locations was also introduced in 1985.

Methods of voting

In the first election, the method of voting was for the elector to delete the names of candidates whom he did not want to support. This proved to be too complex, especially in the case of the Legislative Council with 27 candidates. For the 1860 election, the procedure was changed to placing a X by the names which were supported. This system was retained until 1929, when contingency voting was introduced (see below). Preferences were utilised for the first time. In single-member districts, a formal ballot required sequential numbers for all candidates; in the case of two or more members, a formal vote required sequential numbers to be shown for 'twice the number of candidates to be elected plus one', but allowed further preferences if desired.

INTRODUCTION

In 1936, when all electorates for the House of Assembly became single-member, this contingency voting was effectively changed to the present system of preferential voting. Preferences have to be shown for all candidates. The Legislative Council system continued with multi-member electorates and contingency voting until 1973, when proportional representation was introduced.

Plumping

From the first election, the elector had the right to plump. That is, he had the right to vote for only one candidate in a multi-member electorate. For the colonial period, the numbers of plumpers were regularly published, but towards the end of the 1880s, this reporting became sporadic. Information on plumping is therefore included in the data only for the colonial period.

'Compulsory voting'

From 1857 to 1942, voting was voluntary. In 1942, the Electoral Act was amended to introduce 'compulsory voting' for enrolled House of Assembly electors. In 1985, this was also applied to the Legislative Council.

In fact, there cannot be a compulsion to vote. Rather, the enrolled elector is required to receive a ballot paper and to deposit that paper in the correct receptacle. In practice, there is a general assumption that compulsory voting applies.

3. TRANSLATING VOTES TO SEATS

Over the 150 years of democratic elections, the legislators experimented with a number of different voting systems. The following outlines the systems, and provides examples.

First Past the Post (FPP)

This system, also referred to as the 'plurality' system, applied to all South Australian elections from 1857 to 1929. It is based on the principle of a simple majority – the candidate in a single-member electorate who wins the largest number of votes wins the seat. In a multi-member electorate, for example electing three members, the candidates who win the highest, second-highest, and third-highest proportions of the formal votes are elected.

Voting was by a x marked by the candidate(s) of choice, except for the first, 1857, election, when voting was by deletion of candidates not supported.

This system was simple for both electors and counters. But it rarely produced a result at which an elected member could claim that he represented a majority of the voters. In the election for Yorke Peninsula in 1890, there were 20 candidates for the two-member electorate. The members elected received 19.2% and 12.6% of the formal votes.

Contingency voting

This system was introduced for both the House of Assembly and the Legislative Council in 1929. It introduced preferences for the first time.

In a single-member electorate, electors were required to number all candidates with sequential numbers. In a multi-member contest, electors were required to mark sequential numbers for 'not less than twice the number of candidates to be elected, plus one', but could continue with preferences beyond this.

In single-member electorates, a candidate with an absolute majority (at least 50% + 1 vote) of the formal votes was elected. If no candidate received an absolute majority, the candidate with the fewest 1st preference votes was excluded, and 'each of his un-exhausted ballot-papers' was transferred in terms of the 2nd preference shown. This process continued until one candidate received an absolute majority.

INTRODUCTION

In multi-member electorates, for example a three-member electorate, the counting process was complex. If any candidate received an absolute majority, he or she was declared elected. To establish the second elected candidate, all of the votes for the elected candidate were transferred in accordance with 2nd preferences. If no candidate received an absolute majority, then the votes for the least supported candidate were transferred in terms of preferences shown, and this process continued until an absolute majority was obtained. To establish the third elected candidate, the 1st preference votes for the elected candidates were transferred again, and further exclusions carried out, until the third absolute majority was attained.

Example: Electorate of Woorroora, 1933 general election.

1st preference votes

Candidates	Affil.	Votes	%
Butler RL*	LCL	3 256	46.3
Collins M		2 024	28.8
Parker AJ		833	11.8
Cameron AG*	LCL	481	6.8
Dennison S*	LCL	278	4.0
Willis EGE		165	2.3

There was no absolute majority, hence Willis, Dennison and Cameron were excluded, and Butler was elected.

BUTLER	LCL	3 652	51.9	elected
Collins		2 376	33.8
Parker		1 009	14.3

To establish the second elected candidate, the count returned to 1st preference votes. All 1st preference votes for the elected Butler were transferred by 2nd preferences, with the result:

Cameron	LCL	3 445	49.0
Collins		2 119	30.2
Parker		847	12.0
Dennison	LCL	451	6.4
Willis		175	2.5

In the absence of an absolute majority, Willis and Dennison were excluded, with Cameron elected.

CAMERON	LCL	3 738	53.1	elected
Collins		2 307	32.8
Parker		992	14.1

To establish the third elected member, the count returned to 1st preference votes. All 1st preference votes for the elected Butler and Cameron were transferred according to 2nd preferences, with the result:

DENNISON	LCL	3 645	51.8	elected
Collins		2 308	32.8
Parker		882	12.5
Willis		202	2.9

As this example demonstrates, when political parties nominated three candidates in a three-member electorate, the effect of contingency voting was to strongly favour the election of all three. The return to 1st preference votes to allocate preferences virtually ensured this.

Preferential Voting

The system of contingent voting which was used in the multi-member electorates from 1930, was effectively changed to preferential voting in the single-member electorates which were introduced for the House of Assembly in 1936. In this system, the 1st preference votes are not transferred; the process of establishing an absolute majority utilises the exclusion of the least supported candidate(s).

INTRODUCTION

For example, in the electorate of Burra in 1938, the 1st preference votes were:

Candidates	Affil.	Votes	%
McDonald AD	LCL	1 530	39.1
Canny TJ	ALP	1 181	30.2
George EE		742	19.0
Collins M		456	11.7

Collins was excluded:

McDonald AD	LCL	1 650	42.2
Canny TJ		1 271	32.5
George EE		988	25.3

George was excluded:

McDONALD AD	LCL	2 305	59.0	elected
Canny TJ		1 604	41.0

This system has been used in House of Assembly elections since 1938.

Contingency voting applied for Legislative Council elections until 1975, when a variant of proportional voting – a ‘list system’ – in a single State-wide electorate was introduced.

Closed List System – Legislative Council

The ballot paper contained candidates in groups – parties, groups and individuals. Electors were not able to vote for individual candidates, but had to mark sequential numbers next to each list.

The subsequent counting system was complex. The first step was to calculate the ‘prescribed number’ by dividing the total number of 1st preference votes by one more than the number of vacant seats and dividing the result by two. This established half a quota.

The second step was to exclude from the count any list whose support in 1st preference votes was less than the half-quota. The ballot papers of these excluded lists were transferred in accordance with 2nd preferences to the lists remaining in the count.

The third stage was the calculation of the election quota, the Droop quota, by dividing the number of formal 1st preferences votes by one more than the number of vacant seats, and increasing the quotient obtained by one. Any list which achieved a quota received one seat, two quotas received two seats, and so on. After the count of full quotas, the remaining seats were filled by the lists which had the highest proportion of the quota. Beyond the initial allocation of preferences from the excluded lists, there was no further preference allocation.

Example: 1975 election, 11 vacant seats

Formal votes: 687 063 Prescribed number: 28 628 Quota: 57 058

INTRODUCTION

Proportional representation, single transferable vote - Legislative Council 1982

Electors had the right to vote for individual candidates, although the ballot paper included candidates for each party in a group. Electors had to place sequential numbers by each candidate.

The count required the calculation of a quota – the number of formal votes divided by the number of vacant seats + one and increasing the quotient obtained by one. Any candidate who received a quota on 1st preference was elected. To fill the next set of seats, the surplus votes from elected candidates were transferred to the remaining candidates on the basis of preferences indicated. To fill the final set of seats, the least supported candidates were excluded and preferences transferred until all quotas were filled.

Example – 1982 election. Quota: 60 581

In 1985, the ballot paper was modified to allow the elector a choice between 'above/below the line', with the Droop quota applied. The 'above' the line was based on a group list, which required electors to mark one voting square, thus indicating support for one party/group, and acceptance of the preference allocations decided by that party/group. The 'below' required electors to mark every candidate with sequential numbers. The 'above' is referred to as the Ticket vote.

INTRODUCTION

4. REDISTRIBUTIONS

Over the period 1857 – 2006, the 'electoral map' was changed on many occasions. Redistributions were sometimes caused by an alteration of the numbers of members, sometimes by decisions in the parliament concerning the 'weighting' which was to be applied to the rural electorates, and sometimes by decisions to vary the basis of representation. Since 1991, a redistribution is required to be conducted after each general election. The following is a summary of redistributions which were carried.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

Date	Number of districts	Number of members	Members per district
1856	1	18	1 x 18
1881	4	24	4 x 6
1901	4	18	1 x 6, 3 x 4
1913	5	20	5 x 4
1973	1	22	1 x 22

1976	47	47	47 x 1
1983	47	47	47 x 1
1991	47	47	47 x 1

The initial distribution for the House of Assembly for the 1857 election included 17 electorates electing a total of 36 members. The full list is provided for this first election.

INTRODUCTION

6. LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL DISTRICTS SINCE 1857

There have been a total of nine Legislative Council districts since 1857. The then Province of South Australia formed the district for the upper house of a bicameral Parliament from 1857 to 1884. Commencing in 1884 the Legislative Council was divided into 4 districts, then 5 in 1915, and re-formed as one district in 1975 comprising the now State of South Australia (in existence since federation in 1901). The Province and State of South Australia represent the same geographical area, except for the Northern Territory, which was initially part of South Australia but was transferred to the Commonwealth in 1911.

Shading indicates existence in years shown.

* 'North-Eastern' District became 'Midland' District as a result of Act No.959 of 1908, effective 1908.

7. POLITICAL PARTIES

All elections in South Australia, from the 1857 election which inaugurated the bicameral parliament, until two by-elections for the House of Assembly in 1891, and the 1891 Legislative Council general election, were contested by independents. There were no political parties in existence.

The first political party – the United Labor Party (ULP) – was formed on 7 January 1891, by the Trades and Labour Council. Its first contest was for the Legislative Council in that year, with the remarkable success of winning three of the eight available seats.

The modern Liberal party had its genesis in 1893, with the name National Defence League (NDL). Its stated aim was to resist the Labor party.

These two parties increasingly dominated the elections and the parliaments. By the 1902 election, a 'two-party system' seemed firmly in place. The Labor and (renamed) Australian National League (ANL) won 22 of the 42 seats in the House of Assembly, and half of the seats in the Legislative Council.

But other parties emerged. In 1905, the Farmers and Producers Political Union (FPPU) was formed by the rural entrepreneurs, and in 1906, wheat farmers formed the Liberal and Democratic Union (LDU). These three non-Labor parties contested against each other until 1909, when they decided to amalgamate to form the Liberal Union.

From this developed the Liberal federation, the Liberal Party and, following amalgamation with the then Country Party in 1932, the Liberal and Country League (LCL). In 1976, the LCL re-named itself the Liberal Party.

The Country Party, which formed in time for the 1924 election, had its genesis in the FPPU, the LDU, the Farmers' and Settlers Party (F&S) and the Progressive Country Party (PCP). The Country Party disappeared as a separate organization in 1932, re-emerged in 1963, and under its subsequent names of National Country Party and now National Party, has contested all elections since 1965.

Especially since the 1960s, a multi-party system contesting elections has rapidly developed.

Despite the domination of elections (and of the parliaments) by political parties since 1910, they remained an 'informal' component of official election data in South Australia until very recently.

Parties remained outside of the electoral legislation and it was not until 1985 that they received official recognition. Prior to that, the term 'groups' was used in contests where the nature of the electoral system demanded it – contingent voting, for example. The Electoral Act of that year introduced party registration, and allowed the placing of the names of registered parties on the ballot paper for the first time. (For a reference link to developments in the Electoral Act, see Dean Jaensch, Community Access to the Parliamentary Electoral Processes in South Australia since 1850, State Electoral Office 2002).

INTRODUCTION

8. PRESENTATION AND FORMAT OF DATA

The data for House of Assembly elections are set out in Volume 1; for the Legislative Council in Volume 2.

1857 – 1921

As there are no official polling place results for this period extant, polling place data are included for:

- General election
- By-elections

1857 - 2006

Summary data for the period includes:

- General election
 - data at the Province/State level
 - data at the electorate level
- By-elections
 - data at the electorate level

The information is presented in a standard order:

1. General election (electorate data)
2. By-elections (electorate data)
3. For the period 1857 – 1921, polling place data for general then by-elections.

Electorate Summary Data

The electorate results for both the House of Assembly and Legislative Council are presented in a two-section summary table. For each electorate/division, the first section of the table displays the voting summary and the second section displays the candidate summary – name, affiliation (if applicable), number and percentage of votes received and, for the House of Assembly, results after distribution of preferences (where applicable).

HISTORY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIAN ELECTIONS

PART 1

1857 - 1927

THE 1857 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 1ST PARLIAMENT

Pre-1857

This election inaugurated the parliament of South Australia. A detailed study of the election and its context has been published: C Fort, Electing Responsible Government: South Australia 1857, State Electoral Office, 2001.

At the time of the election, Boyle Travers Finniss led a government which had been formed to administer the election, and to establish the first responsible government.

Election details

The election raised much interest in the Colony, and the lists of candidates indicated this. The 18 places in the Legislative Council attracted 27 candidates (see Volume 2), and the lower house contests for 36 seats attracted 62 candidates. On the other hand, despite the momentous event, and the opportunity to be part of the first parliament, six electorates were uncontested, electing the first nine members.

The Constitution Act of 1855-6 gave a vote to 'every man of the age of 21 years being a subject of Her Majesty'. In 1838, the Aboriginal people of the colony were proclaimed as British subjects, hence male Aborigines were enfranchised to vote from the beginning. The Act denied the right to vote to any man 'attainted or convicted of treason or felony'.

Polling hours were 9 am to 4 pm.

A total of 10 092 were enrolled for the Council, and the total enrolment for the House of Assembly was 15 538. The enrolment in the contested Assembly electorates was 12 235, of which 6 877 (56.2%) voted. Electors were required to delete the names of candidates they did not support, a system which was used only in this election.

The polling was conducted on March 9. The count raised some issues for the administrators. The Register noted (19 March 1857) that in one electorate 10 votes were admitted by the returning officer 'under protest of the scrutineers'. In another electorate, 34 votes were rejected as 17 had no name erased, and 17 'had writing on them'. The report of the Barossa result stated: 'Germans registered 450; Germans voted 350.'

Voting summary

The full details of informal voting were not published, but in eight of the 11 contested districts the total was 218.

THE 1860 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 2ND PARLIAMENT

1857 – 1860

There were no political parties in South Australia until the formation of the United Labor party in 1890. Hence the formation of governments involved personalities and groups – often tenuous – in the parliament. The resultant instability of government was a feature of the colonial period.

In the three years after the 1857 election, there were four different governments. Three came and went in the first year of responsible government. The Finnis government was replaced by John Baker (the first leader of a government from the Legislative Council), then by RR Torrens, and by RD Hanson, the last forming the fourth government in a period of only seven months. Hanson's government took the Assembly into the 1860 election.

There was also instability in the membership. There were 14 by-elections held during the life of the parliament.

Election details

There were 55 candidates, of whom eight were elected unopposed. Hence 47 candidates nominated for the 12 contested electorates and the 28 contested seats.

Five electorates were uncontested. The total enrolment for the election had increased from 15 538 in 1857 to 22 265 in 1860. The level of turnout could be identified in 10 of the 11 contested electorates – 6 408 (43.7%). The proportion of informal votes could be identified in 9 electorates – 496 (8.4%).

There was instability, not only in government, but in representation. 22 of the candidates contesting 1860 were sitting members; of these, four were defeated, including leading members of the first parliament and governments, BT Finnis, FS Dutton, GS Kingston and L Glyde.

Polling days were 13 and 23 March, and 3 April, and polling hours were extended to 9 am – 5 pm. Voting was by a cross in a box, a system which was not changed until 1929.

Voting Summary	No.	%
Enrolled	17 681
Voted	6 409	43.7	(in 10 of the 12 contested electorates)
Formal	5 389	92.2	(in 9 of the 12 contested electorates)
Informal	493	8.4	(in 9 of the 12 contested electorates)

Plumpers: details were published for only two electorates – The Sturt and Yatala. 105 of 541 voters plumped in the former, and 116 out of 301 in the latter

THE 1862 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 3RD PARLIAMENT

1860 – 1862

This election was called after only two years, and followed increased instability in government. In 1861, the Colony saw five different governments: RD Hanson was replaced by T Reynolds, who re-shuffled his personnel, only to be replaced by GM Waterhouse, who also carried out a re-shuffle. The instability convinced the Governor that the best solution was an early election.

There were nine by-elections in the inter-election period.

There was a redistribution carried out for this election. The basis of representation was changed to 18 electorates of two members each, with no increase in the total membership of the Assembly.

Election details

Two electorates were uncontested, returning four members. There were 61 candidates, of whom four were elected unopposed; 57 candidates contested 16 electorates and 32 seats.

The polling was conducted on 10, 17 and 24 November.

THE 1865 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 4TH PARLIAMENT

1862 - 1865

The instability of governments continued in the three years following the 1862 election. GM Waterhouse forming government after the election, was replaced by FS Dutton in 1863, Henry Ayers in 1864, who reshuffled his team after one year, and by Arthur Blyth after only a further 11 days.

Three by-elections were held in 1864 – all uncontested.

Election details

The polling days were 1, 9, 13 March, and six of the 18 electorates were uncontested, returning 12 members. A total of 45 candidates contested the remaining 12 electorates.

The total enrolment for all electorates was 23 589, and in the 12 contested electorates, 14 256. No turnout details were published for the electorate of Flinders. The details for this electorate remained relatively unreported for much of the colonial period, partly due to the difficulty of obtaining full details from such a sparsely settled and distant electorate. The press often noted that it was awaiting further figures to arrive by steamer. Further, as the details for many of the very small polling places in Flinders usually could not affect the final results for the electorate, they were often not reported at all.

A total of 8 256 voted in the 11 electorates where details were available, with a formal vote of 7 804 (93.4%) and informal at 452 (6.6%).

Voting Summary	No.	%

Informal*	452	6.6

*(in 11 electorates)

Plumpers: details were published in 10 electorates. Of the 7 664 formal votes in these, 2 667 (34.8%) were plumpers.

THE 1868 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 5TH PARLIAMENT

1865 - 1868

The three years following the 1865 election were the most unstable in terms of government in the history of the parliament. The government of Arthur Blyth was defeated immediately the Assembly met after the election. FS Dutton's government lasted 182 days, Henry Ayers returned for 33 days, then John Hart for 156 days, JP Boucaut for just over one year. Henry Ayers returned to take the Assembly into the election.

Ten by-elections were necessary in this period. The electorate of Light saw two by-elections when the first, contested by J Rounsevell and JT Bagot produced a very close result. An appeal by Bagot resulted in a second by-election, in which he was again narrowly defeated.

Election details

Polling days were 6, 21 April and 4 May. Three of the 18 electorates were uncontested, returning six members. The enrolment continued to increase, with 27 391 enrolled in 1868. There were 61 candidates overall, and 55 candidates for the 30 contested seats.

THE 1870 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 6TH PARLIAMENT

1868 - 1870

This election was called early, after continuing instability in the governments. The Henry Ayers government which emerged after the 1868 election was defeated only three months later. His replacement, J Hart, survived 19 days before defeat by Henry Ayers, whose period in office lasted only 21 days until defeat by HBT Strangways, who took the parliament into the early election.

Four by-elections were held, two in 1868 and two in 1870.

Election details

For the first time, all electorates were contested, by 71 candidates. Polling dates were 28 March, 5 April.

THE 1871 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 7TH PARLIAMENT

1870 - 1871

The instability of government became worse in this brief period. The Strangways government which was in office at the 1870 election lasted less than a month before tensions in the government and the Assembly forced a re-shuffle. Eighteen days later, he was defeated by J Hart, who was defeated after a year in office. His replacement, Neville Blyth, promptly sought and achieved a dissolution of the Assembly.

After less than two years from the 1870 election, the voters were again asked to judge the members of parliament. All polling, except for Flinders (December 27), was on one day – 14 December. One electorate was uncontested.

Three by-elections were held in 1871.

Election details

The total enrolment for the colony had increased to 29 009, with 27 512 enrolled in the 17 contested electorates.

The results in the Flinders electorate were not reported.

THE 1875 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 8TH PARLIAMENT

1871 – 1875

A redistribution was carried out in 1872 transforming the electoral geography. The new structure increased the number of electorates from 18 to 22, and the number of members from 36 to 46. The system returned to electorates containing different numbers of members - three 3-member electorates, 18 with two members, and North Adelaide with one member.

The instability of government continued, but it was a battle between two leaders. Henry Ayers who, from the Legislative Council, led more ministries than any other person in the history of SA, had defeated Blyth as soon as the Assembly met, one month after the 1871 election, re-shuffled his ministry after only 42 days, and then survived until he was defeated by Arthur Blyth in July 1873. Blyth remained in office and took the parliament to the full term.

Seven by-elections were held in this period.

Election details

The total enrolment for the Colony had grown to 35 035.

Three electorates uncontested, returning six members.

There were 78 candidates, six of whom were elected unopposed.

The election dates were 10, 11, 12, 22 February and 1 March.

Voting Summary	No.	%
Enrolled	30 941
Voted	17 466	56.4
Formal	16 786	96.2
Informal	680	3.8

Plumpers: details were published for 13 electorates. In the single-member electorate of North Adelaide, all votes were effectively plumps. In the 13 electorates, 3 818 (28.3%) plumped.

THE 1878 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 9TH PARLIAMENT

1875 - 1878

The three years after the 1875 election continued the instability of government. Arthur Blyth was replaced by JP Boucaut only two months after the 1875 election. He re-shuffled his ministry in March 1876, but survived only 73 days before defeat by John Colton. Boucaut returned in 1877, and took the parliament into the 1878 election in April.

14 by-elections were necessary in this period, equalling the 1857-60 number.

Election details

Eight electorates were uncontested, returning 15 members. This was the highest proportion of uncontested elections in the history of the Colony. A total of 68 candidates nominated, 53 in contested electorates.

The total enrolment was 39 987, and 25 749 in the contested electorates.

The polling days were 2, 11, 16 and 30 April

THE 1884 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 11TH PARLIAMENT

1881 - 1884

The stability of government continued after William Morgan was defeated by JC Bray only two months after the 1881 election. Bray took the parliament into the 1884 election after a full term. Seven by-elections were held in the period.

Election details

The election was held on April 8 and 23, and was contested on new boundaries. A redistribution returned to uniform numbers of member per electorate, with twenty six 2-member electorates. The total enrolment was 57 640.

Two electorates were uncontested. Contested enrolment, 52 177. There were 98 candidates, four of whom were elected unopposed.

In 1883, the polling hours were extended to 8 am to 6 pm.

There were no published data for three electorates, hence the turnout, formal and informal below refers to 21 electorates

Voting Summary	No.	%

THE 1887 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 12TH PARLIAMENT

1884 - 1887

By 1887, there was a growing division within the parliament between groups of members who were described as 'conservative' and 'radical' by the press. The 'conservatives' found their leaders in John Cox Bray and John William Downer, while the 'radicals' were led by John Colton, Thomas Playford and John Cockburn.

These were not parties, but loose alliances, and the leaders often contested government against their reported allies. But the alliances did produce an element of political 'structure' within the parliament and in the electorate, and continued the trend to more government stability.

John Colton defeated the Bray government in June 1884, in the early days of the new parliament. He was replaced by Downer one year later, who took the parliament into the 1887 election.

Six by-elections were held in the period.

Election details

Polling days were March 19, 22, April 2, 6, 21. There were two electorates uncontested. The total enrolment, including these, was 60 920.

105 candidates – a record number – contested the election, with 11 candidates contesting the two seats in West Torrens.

THE 1890 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 13TH PARLIAMENT

1887 - 1890

The Northern Territory became an electorate for the House of Assembly, increasing the House to 54 members, elected from twenty seven 2-member districts.

The divisions between the conservative and radical groups in the Assembly continued after the 1887 election, as did the instability. The Downer (conservative) government was defeated immediately after the election, and the Playford (radical) government was formed. After two years, the more radical JA Cockburn group replaced the Playford government, and took the parliament into the election.

Election details

All districts were contested, and the number of candidates increased to 183. 20 candidates contested the two seats in Yorke Peninsula. Polling hours were extended in 1889 to 8 am – 7 pm.

1890 saw the formation of the first political party in SA – the United Labor party (ULP). However, the ULP did not contest the 1890 election, hence this was the last general election without parties.

Polling dates were 9, 11, 18, 19, 23 April.

There were three by-elections in this period.

THE 1893 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 14TH PARLIAMENT

1890 - 1893

Following the 1890 election, the Cockburn government lost a no-confidence motion moved by Thomas Playford, who formed a government which lasted nearly two years. He was replaced by an equally progressive leader in FW Holder, but his ministry was defeated by the very conservative JW Downer, who took the parliament into the election.

The United Labor Party had contested its first general election for the 1891 Legislative Council poll (see Volume 2). It contested two by-elections for the House of Assembly in May 1891 and January 1892, winning a seat in both – Wallaroo and East Adelaide.

In 1892, the second party in South Australia formed – the National Defence League (NDL). This was a party created by the 'conservative' forces in the Colony, and this sharpened the existing conflict with the more radical groups. One issue which was increasingly dividing these two groups was the restrictive franchise for the Legislative Council.

By the 1893 election, both parties had built up an impressive electoral organization, and they both had success.

Six by-elections were held in the period.

Election details

The Absent Voters Act of July 1890 introduced the right of an absent vote for electors who believed they would be absent from their electoral district on the day of the election.

Polling days: 15 April, 19 April, 6 May

All electorates were contested. Candidates: 129; including ULP 12, NDL 27

THE 1896 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 15TH PARLIAMENT

1893 - 1896

The period after the 1893 election saw an increasing competition between the two new political parties – the ULP and NDL. It also reflected a trend for the conservative members to gravitate to the NDL, and the progressive members to support Charles Cameron Kingston, a strong advocate of progressive social policy and reform of the Legislative Council. There was no 'Kingston party', but there was a relatively cohesive Kingston group among the independent members and candidates.

Immediately following the 1893 election, the Downer government was defeated, with the ULP voting with the mover, CC Kingston. This ushered in the longest term of government in the history of the colony to that date – 6 years and 168 days.

An amendment to the Electoral Act in 1894 extended the franchise to women, and absent voting rights on the grounds of health, or residing more than three miles from a polling place. The grant of a right to vote had an immediate effect on turnout. Enrolment increased by 87 per cent from 1893 to 1896, compared to an average increase of about 5 per cent. Turnout increased by 83 per cent.

Two by-elections were necessary in the period.

Election details

The 1896 election saw all electorates contested with 126 candidates. The ULP and NDL had become entrenched to the point where they dominated the number of candidates, votes and seats won. Polling days were 25 April, and 2 May (NT). Absent votes were allowed to be issued through post offices.

THE 1899 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 16TH PARLIAMENT

1896 - 1899

The 1899 election was a contest between three increasingly dominating groups – the ULP, the NDL, and the Kingston progressives. It was also dominated by one issue – the restrictive franchise for the Legislative Council. The Kingston government, which had secured a majority with the strong support of the ULP, had attempted to broaden the franchise in 1898, but the NDL and conservative majority of the Council had rejected the Bill. Kingston took the Assembly into the 1899 election with this issue dominant.

Seven by-elections were necessary in this period.

Election details

Polling dates: 29 April, 6 May. One electorate was uncontested, and 117 candidates nominated for the remaining 52 seats. The total enrolment was 152 393.

One Free Trade candidate nominated, and the former increasing domination by ULP and NDL decreased slightly, with an intense battle between the conservatives and the Kingston progressives.

Voting Summary	No.	%

THE 1902 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 17TH PARLIAMENT

THE FIRST PARLIAMENT ELECTED FOR THE STATE OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

1899 - 1902

Following the 1899 election, Kingston tried again for franchise reform. The Assembly voted against the measure, 26-25, and Kingston resigned his ministry. He was replaced by VJ Solomon for a brief interregnum of 7 days, when FW Holder formed a government which, for the first time, included a member of the United Labor party – EL Batchelor.

The NDL changed its name to the Australian National League.

Election details

The parliament was transformed by the impact of federation. Seven leading SA members of the House of Assembly resigned and were elected to the federal parliament. As a result there were 11 by-elections in this period.

The Assembly was reduced in numbers, from 54 to 42. A redistribution was carried out following these changes, to produce a chamber elected from 13 districts - one 5-member, two four-member, nine 3-member and one 2-member electorates.

The election was a 'new start' for the parliament. The polling date was 3 May, all seats were contested, and there were 86 candidates.

THE 1905 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 18TH PARLIAMENT

1902 - 1905

The first State ministry was formed after the 1902 election by JG Jenkins, who resigned prior to the 1905 election on his appointment as Agent-General in London. Richard Butler took the parliament into the 1905 election held on 27 May.

Prior to the election, a new party formed. The rural stockowners and graziers were concerned at the concentration of the ANL on the metropolitan electorates and urban issues. In 1905, these interests formed the Farmers and Producers Political Union (FPPU), which had a conservative political agenda, and was absolutely opposed to franchise reform. It was essentially the rural wing of the ANL.

There were four distinct blocs at the election, with the over-riding issue that of franchise reform for the Legislative Council: the Labor Party, a group of franchise reformers led by AH Peake; the Butler moderate conservatives, with some FPPU support; and an extreme conservative group led by J Darling at the core of the NDL.

In 1904, the restrictions on the voting rights of prisoners were modified with the provision that the vote was denied to any person convicted and under sentence for any offence punishable by a sentence of one year or longer.

One by-election was required.

THE 1906 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 19TH PARLIAMENT

1905 - 1906

The Butler ministry was defeated when the new parliament met in July 1905, and Labor became part of a unique 'lib-lab' government. The ministry was a coalition between the ULP led by Tom Price, and the liberal group led by AH Peake. There were two Labor members – Price and AA Kirkpatrick, and two liberal – Peake and L O'Loughlin.

The deadlock over the franchise issue continued with the Legislative Council. After yet another attempt at reform, rejected by the Council, Price resigned his ministry, but when Butler, as leader of the opposition, was unable to form a ministry, Price/Peake remained in office. After more conflict with the Council, Price and Peake obtained an early election, and campaigned as a 'ministerial alliance'.

At the same time, Peake agreed to pressure from within his group to form a new party – the Liberal and Democratic Union (LDU). This drew its membership from the small wheat farmers of the State, and at this stage, the LDU was firmly in favour of franchise reform, willing to be in coalition with Labor, and opposed to both the ANL and the FPPU.

One by-election was required.

THE 1910 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 20TH PARLIAMENT

1906 - 1910

The 'lib-lab' alliance collapsed on the death of Price in 1909. The LDU decided to accept an invitation from the conservative parties to unite into a concerted force against the Labor party. The Liberal Union (LU) was formed in September 1909.

The Price-Peake government became the Peake government after the death of Price, when all Labor representation in the ministry was removed. This government took the Assembly into the 1910 election.

In 1908, the Electoral Act was amended to enable electors to receive assistance to vote. Employers were also required to give their employees leave of absence to vote.

Seven by-elections were required in this period.

Election details

All seats were contested; polling day 2 April; 81 candidates.

Voting Summary	No.	%
Enrolled	183 418
Voted	130 294	71.0
Formal	128 170	98.4
Informal	2 124	1.6

ULP	197 935	49.1	29	22
LU	199 915	49.7	45	20
	5 317	0.2	7	0

This election entrenched a two-party system in the State. Only a miniscule number of votes went to candidates other than the two parties, which shared the seats in the Assembly.

THE 1912 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 21ST PARLIAMENT

1910 - 1912

Following the 1910 election, John Verran formed the first Labor government in its own right in the State.

The Verran government was in immediate conflict with the Liberal dominated Legislative Council, and in 1911, the Council proposed amendments to the Budget which were unacceptable to the Labor government. Verran sought a dissolution for the 1912 election.

The United Labor Party became the Australian Labor Party (ALP) before the election.

There were no by-elections in this period, the first time since the first election in 1857.

Election details

This election was for 40 seats after the Northern Territory was transferred to the Commonwealth. All seats were contested, and there were 76 candidates. Polling day 10 February.

Voting Summary	No.	%

Two instances reported in The Advertiser at this and a following (1913) by-election suggest that absent votes were not considered important in the cases where they were not crucial to the result.

‘650 absent votes were not counted because they could not unseat the four leading candidates’.

‘... the Returning Officer at Strathalbyn said he did not propose to count ... the absent votes’.

THE 1915 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 22ND PARLIAMENT

1912 - 1915

A redistribution in 1913 was forced by the enlargement of the House of Assembly to 46 members. The State was divided into 19 electoral districts: eight 3-member, eleven 2-member.

The Liberal Union changed its name to Liberal Party (LIB)

Two by-elections were necessary in this period.

Election details

Polling date – 27 March. Five electorates uncontested, electing 11 members. 68 candidates nominated. Total enrolment 253 391; in the contested electorates – 181 516. Absent votes were introduced at static polling places.

Voting Summary	No.	%
Enrolled	181 516
Voted	136 055	75.0
Formal	134 641	98.9
Informal	1 441	1.1

Affiliation	No. Votes	% Votes	Seats
			Cont.	Won
LIB	171 993	51.6	29	14 (20)
ALP	153 034	45.9	34	15 (26)
	8 405	2.5	5	0

Further counting problems emerged. In the Sturt electorate, The Advertiser reported:

‘When the voting papers in connection with the referendum were being counted at Glenelg, a number of votes in favour of House of Assembly candidates were discovered. They are designated ‘sundry’ votes in the table’.

The election was held in conjunction with a referendum on closing times for hotels. The result was a majority in favour of 6 pm.

THE 1918 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 23RD PARLIAMENT

1915-1918

The 1915 general election brought the defeat of the Peake Liberal government, and the formation of a Labor government under Crawford Vaughan. This remained until 1917, when Labor suffered a split over conscription. This split resulted in the formation of a secessionist Nationalist Labor party (NLP) from the ALP. An unsuccessful attempt was made by the Liberal party to forge a coalition with the ex-Labor Nationalist party.

Vaughan resigned his ministry after the opposition, under AH Peake, carried an adjournment motion in the Assembly. Peake initially formed a ministry of Liberals, but after complaints from the Nationalists who had supported him in the motion, he included three NLP members. Crawford Vaughan, the leader of the NLP, did not take a place in the ministry.

Prior to the 1918 election, three more parties emerged. The Farmers and Settlers' Party (F&S), Single Tax (ST) and the Farmers and Producers Country Party (FPCP). The Liberal and National Labor parties went to the election in coalition.

There were five by-elections in this period.

Election details

Selina Siggins and Jeanne Young were the first women candidates in South Australia. Both nominated as independents, in Adelaide and Sturt respectively

There were 116 candidates, and all seats were contested. Polling day 6 April.

THE 1921 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 24TH PARLIAMENT

1918 - 1921

The coalition between the National Labor Party and the Liberal Party collapsed, and the former then re-named itself the Progressive Country Party (PCP) in 1920.

The death of AH Peake in 1920 brought HN Barwell to the leadership of the government. He took the parliament into the election.

In 1920, a joint roll was inaugurated by the State and Commonwealth.

One by-election was held, in 1920.

Election details

There was one electorate uncontested returning 2 members, and 103 candidates contested the remaining 46 seats. The total enrolment was 272 022. Election date April 9 and 16.

THE 1927 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 26TH PARLIAMENT

1924 - 1927

The Barwell Liberal government was defeated in the 1924 election, and this brought the formation of a Labor government under John Gunn. In 1926, LL Hill replaced John Gunn as Labor leader and Premier.

The Liberal Party attempted to form a coalition with the Country Party, but when this was rejected, Country Party candidates were given no Liberal opposition in six seats in five rural electorates.

In 1925, the right to a postal vote was extended to electors who were ill (previously available to women only).

Six by-elections were held 1924 – 1927.

Election details

Polling date, 26 March. Four electorates were uncontested. Total enrolment 309 588. 85 candidates contested the election.

HISTORY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIAN ELECTIONS

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY

PART 2

1930 - 1975

THE 1930 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 27TH PARLIAMENT

1927 – 1930

Following the 1927 election, which saw the defeat of the Hill Labor ministry, RL Butler formed a ministry which took the parliament into the 1930 election.

One by-election was held in the 1927 – 1930 period.

Election details

This election introduced a new process for translating votes to seats – contingency voting. For the first time, electors were required to provide preferences. The arithmetic of the process was complex, and has been explained in the Introduction.

The new 1929 Act provided for postal voting for electors outside their electoral districts, further than five miles from a polling place, travelling on polling day, or seriously ill. Absent voting was available for electors who sought to vote within their electorate, but outside their sub-division.

A separate Act established that future redistributions would be conducted by a Commission of three members.

The election on 5 April was fought by 99 candidates, with a number of new political parties contesting. The State-wide enrolment was 325 244, with two electorates uncontested.

THE 1933 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 28TH PARLIAMENT

1930 - 1933

In 1933, prior to the election on 8 April, LL Hill resigned as Premier, and John Gunn was elected to the post by the Labor Party. At the same time, Labor suffered a split over the Premiers' Plan. Hill had supported the Plan as the Premier of the State, but this had brought strong opposition within his party. Faced with a motion to depose him, he resigned to become the SA Agent General in London. RS Richards was elected as leader. As a result of the split, the Lang Labor Party(LANG) and the Premiers' Plan Labor Party formed (PPLAB).

The Liberal Party had also undergone change. The 1931 Senate election in SA was fought by a Liberal-based Emergency Committee and, in 1932, the Liberal and Country parties agreed to merge, to form the Liberal and Country League (LCL).

Two by-elections were held.

Election details

The election was contested by 127 candidates, with three electorates uncontested. The total enrolment was 338 576.

THE 1938 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 29TH PARLIAMENT

1933 - 1938

The Butler LCL ministry remained in office.

In 1933 the Constitution Act was amended to extend the life of the parliament to five years. In 1937, a further amendment made this permanent.

A redistribution was carried out in 1936. The new system involved 39 single-member electorates, as a result of which the contingency vote system effectively became a single transferable vote (STV), preferential system.

Four by-elections were held.

Election details

The election on 19 March involved 129 candidates, despite the fact that two seats were uncontested. One reason for the large number was the involvement of independent candidates, with a record number since the formation of the party system in 1910. The enrolment for all seats was 364 884.

Marie Skitch became the first woman endorsed to stand for parliament by the Labor Party (Thebarton district).

THE 1941 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 30TH PARLIAMENT

1938 - 1941

The defeat of an LCL minister in the election saw Tom Playford fill the vacancy. Premier Butler resigned to contest a federal election, and Playford was elected leader and Premier. This began a British Commonwealth record of unbroken Playford government from 1938 to 1965.

But the beginning was unstable. With only 15 seats in the Assembly, Playford depended on the support of at least five of the independents. This was easily achieved, as the independents were mainly rural and conservative.

In 1939, three-year terms were restored for the House of Assembly.

One by-election was held in the 1938 – 1941 period.

Election details

At the polling date of 29 March, there were a total of 94 candidates. There were 32 contested and seven uncontested seats, with the State-wide enrolment of 378 265. Polling hours were extended to 8 am – 8 pm in 1941.

The franchise was extended to any members of the armed forces who were British subjects and had served overseas.

THE 1944 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 31ST PARLIAMENT

1941 – 1944

The Playford LCL ministry continued in office.

An amendment to the Electoral Act in 1942 introduced 'compulsory voting' for House of Assembly elections, but voluntary enrolment remained. This still applies. It also made the marking of full preferences on the ballot paper compulsory.

Two by-elections were held in the 1941 – 1944 period.

Election details

The election dates were 29 April for 38 electorates and 10 June for Angas. Nine seats were uncontested. The total enrolment was 401 747. There were 70 candidates in contested seats, and a further nine candidates were elected unopposed.

THE 1947 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 32ND PARLIAMENT

1944 – 1947

The Playford LCL ministry continued.

In 1946, a declaration vote was introduced as a provisional vote for electors whose name did not appear on the roll. If the right to vote was validated, the declaration vote was included in the count.

Four by-elections were held in the period.

Election details

At the 8 March polling day, no less than 13 of the 39 seats were uncontested. A total number of 71 candidates contested the 39 electorates. The State-wide roll was 418 308.

THE 1950 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 33RD PARLIAMENT

1947 – 1950

The Playford LCL ministry continued. The 1947 election provided Playford's LCL government with a majority in its own right. This was continued at every election until 1965. As a result, only rarely was there any factor in the inter-election periods which merited comment. In fact, as from the 1947 election a high proportion of the seats were uncontested, as both Labor and LCL were all but unassailable in their safe seats.

Two by-elections were held in the period.

Election details

Fourteen seats were uncontested in this election held on 4 March. The total State-wide roll was 437 832, and 72 candidates nominated.

THE 1956 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 35TH PARLIAMENT

1953 - 1956

The Playford LCL ministry continued.

A redistribution in 1954, effective at this election, retained the same number of 39 seats, and the approximate 2:1 ratio of malapportionment against the metropolitan area.

A new split in the Labor party was followed by the formation of the Anti-Communist Labor party.

One by-election was held in this period.

Election details

Sixteen seats were uncontested, nearly half of the total seats. The total enrolment was 468 303, and there were 76 candidates.

Polling day was 3 March.

THE 1968 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 39TH PARLIAMENT

1965 - 1968

The 1965 election saw the defeat of the Playford LCL government after an unbroken term since 1938. The Labor victory brought FW Walsh to lead the government. In June 1967, Walsh retired and DA Dunstan became Premier.

For the first time, since 1910-1912, there were no by-elections necessary.

THE 1970 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 40TH PARLIAMENT

1968 – 1970

With Labor and LCL equal in numbers after the 1968 election, the government was decided when the sole independent, TC Stott, decided to support the LCL. The Steele Hall government was formed, and Stott was elected Speaker.

A redistribution was carried through in 1969 which increased the number of members from 39 to 47, and removed some of the malapportionment in favour of rural areas.

The early election was called after a dispute over the siting of a dam on the River Murray. Premier Hall sought a dam at Dartmouth; opposition leader Dunstan demanded it be at Chowilla. Speaker Stott moved that the two dams be built simultaneously. Hall sought and was granted a dissolution of the Assembly.

One by-election was held in the period. After the count in Millicent at the 1968 election, the Labor party won the seat by one vote. The Court of Disputed Returns decided on a new election in the district, which was won comfortably by Labor.

Election details

Polling day 30 May, all seats contested, 124 candidates.

THE 1973 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 41ST PARLIAMENT

1970 - 1973

In 1971, the franchise was changed to grant a right to vote to citizens of age 18, which came into affect after the Adelaide by-election in 1972.

In 1972, a long-standing dispute in the LCL came to a head. The conflict was based on the issue of the restricted franchise for the Legislative Council. Steele Hall favoured adult franchise; the leader of the LCL in the Legislative Council demanded the retention of the property restrictions. These positions split the LCL in both houses. In March 1972, the LCL in the Assembly voted to introduce elected ministries. Hall resigned the leadership of the party. His faction then formed the Liberal Movement (LM) as a 'party within a party', and the LM nominated candidates under that banner, as well as LCL.

One by-election was held in the period.

THE 1977 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 43RD PARLIAMENT

1975 – 1977

The Dunstan Labor ministry continued.

In 1976, the parliament removed all restrictions on the voting rights of prisoners. The Electoral Act was also amended to introduce an electoral visitor system as a mobile polling service to institutions such as hospitals and nursing homes.

The passage of an Act in 1976 finally transformed the election system of the Assembly to one vote, one value, with the principle entrenched into the Constitution Act. This redistribution was the 'trigger' for the Dunstan government to seek and be granted an early election. The 1975 election had resulted in a minority Labor government; Premier Dunstan sought a better 'mandate'.

Also in 1976, the Liberal Movement faced financial pressures. One faction of the LM followed Hall back into the LCL which then changed its name to Liberal Party (LIB). The other faction, led by Robin Millhouse, formed the LM into the New LM, and then was part of the formation of the Australian Democrats (DEM)

No by-elections were necessary in the period.

Polling day 17 September, all seats contested, 122 candidates.

THE 1979 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 44TH PARLIAMENT

1977 - 1979

The retirement of Labor Premier Dunstan on the ground of ill-health saw Des Corcoran become Premier. In 1979 he sought and was granted an early election on the basis that he desired his own mandate. The Labor party was soundly defeated.

One by-election was held in the period.

Election details

Polling day 15 September, 139 candidates, all seats contested.

THE 1985 GENERAL ELECTION - FORMED THE 46TH PARLIAMENT

1982 - 1985

The 1982 election saw the Labor party win government, and John Bannon formed the ministry.

In 1985, the special enrolment right which had been guaranteed to British subjects was removed. The new law required Australian citizenship to achieve the right to enrol for all, including British subjects who arrived in the State after 26 October 1983. The special right granted was retained for all British subject enrolments before that date.

Two by-elections were held in the period.

This election was held after the second redistribution conducted by an independent commission.
